Now after the Sabbath, toward the dawn of the first day of the week, Mary Magdalene and the other Mary went to see the tomb. And behold, there was a great earthquake, for an angel of the Lord descended from heaven and came and rolled back the stone and sat on it. His appearance was like lightning, and his clothing white as snow. And for fear of him the guards trembled and became like dead men. But the angel said to the women, "Do not be afraid, for I know that you seek Jesus who was crucified. He is not here, for he has risen, as he said. Come, see the place where he lay. (Mathew 28:1-6)

It is certainly an account that we have heard more than once. It actually is a true story that we tell time and time again in each church service. It is told in the liturgy. It is told in the preaching of God's Word. It is told in the celebration of the sacraments. Jesus Christ, the Son of God, crucified and risen for the forgiveness of our sins. It is truly the Good News of the Gospel and the event in which we put our faith and hope.

If it was not for the resurrection of Jesus, everything else that happened in his life and ministry would be worth nothing. It is the event of the resurrection that is the final fulfillment of God's plan of salvation for us all. In the resurrection we find hope and comfort for the days ahead of us. The days when we face trials and tribulation, anxiety and distress, even illness and even death.

On Easter Sunday, when we hear the words "He is Risen!" and respond "He is risen indeed! Alleluia!" we celebrate the victory that he has won for us and affirm that by the gift of faith, created in us by the Holy Spirit, that we too are joined with the whole company of heaven and all the saints on earth. Together we celebrate because the tomb could not hold him and that God raised him from the dead, giving to us that promise of eternal life with him in heaven.

May the joy of the resurrection be yours not only on Easter Day, but each and every day. He is risen! He is risen indeed! Alleluia!

With Great Joy In Christ Our Risen King,

Every year at this time I sit back during class time and look around at the amazing classroom community we have created together. We still have occasions from day to day where we need to take a moment to learn together through a difficult situation, but for the most part, our kiddos have transformed from unsure and timid preschoolers who require constant assistance throughout our class day to confident learners capable of managing the challenges of each new day on their own.

This year I feel like our community of learners has excelled in two areas in particular. First of all, they have learned to value the relationships with their peers. We have worked tirelessly on teaching them the skills to get their friends' attention by tapping them on the shoulder, saying their name, looking them in the eye and then talking to their peer. This meant that we have had to really work on learning the names of our peers. There is nothing sweeter to our human ears than to hear our names being said by others. We have also given them the tool of how to handle a situation when we can't just quite think of the name and we see our kiddos politely ask their friend for their name if they forget. Hearing our kiddos use the names of their friends during our class time has changed the feel of our classroom and we just love it so much.

The other thing that we have worked really hard on is advocating for ourselves. We want our kiddos to know that they have a voice and how to use it for positive change. If you are feeling smushed sitting on the rug, it is perfectly acceptable to kindly ask your friend to give you a bit more space or to move yourself to a place where you feel more comfortable. If you are building a tower and a friend knocks it over, it is absolutely appropriate to tell your friend how that makes you feel and to ask them to not do it again. You may even ask for their assistance in the rebuilding process if you feel like you would like to include them in your play efforts. We are still occasionally hearing our kiddos ask the teachers for assistance in those social situations, but with a reminder to use their voice, kiddos are starting to, more and more often, tackle those situations on their own. They are using their toolbox and we are so very proud of them.

We would love to fill our classroom community with even more learners for the 2024-2025 school year and have openings in all of our classes. If you know of someone with a kiddo who is 3-5 years old and would benefit from the Share and Care experience, we would love to chat with them. Encourage them to check out our website (www.shareandcarepreschool.com) for more information and they can even schedule a tour of our facility through that website.

We thank you for your continued support of our preschool ministry. We absolutely love what we do.

Blessed,

Sarah Hoffman
